

HASHIT

Run No: 1667

Hare: Mumford

Where: Adjin St

When: 13 August 2007

Well folks, I've spent the last two weekends in Sydney and I'm knackered, so this weeks Hashit will be short and sweet.

Short and sweet can also be used to describe Mumford's effort as hare last week. The run was good, which Mumford did not set. The food was good, which Mumford did not cook. In fact all he managed to achieve was DHOTW for basically not doing much at all.

Hash Trash

Aussies - you just gotta luv 'em!! They call a spade a fking shovel and then just get on with it.

An Aussie was sitting at a bar in Sydney when this huge, burly American guy walks in. As he passes the Aussie, he hits him on the neck knocking him to the floor.

The big, burly Yank says, "That's a karate chop from Korea."

Well, the Aussie gets back on his barstool and resumes drinking his beer.

The burly Yank then gets up to go to the bathroom and, as he walks by the Aussie, he hits him on the other side of the neck and knocks him to the floor. "That's a judo chop from Japan", he says.

The Aussie decides he's had enough and leaves. A half hour later he comes back and sees the burly Yank guy sitting at the bar. He walks up behind him and smacks him on the head, knocking him out.

The Aussie says to the bartender, "When he wakes up mate, tell him that Was a f g crowbar from Bunnings."

A man kills a deer and takes it home to cook for dinner. Both he and his wife decide that they won't tell the kids what kind of meat it is, but will give them a clue and let them guess.

The kids were eager to know what the meat was on their plates, so begged their dad for the clue "Well" he said, "It's what mummy calls me sometimes"

The little girl screams: "Don't eat it. It's a fucking asshole!"

Bizarre News Story of the Week

Men urged to 'win' their girlfriends a boob job

Brisbane Times. August 13, 2007 - 4:03PM

A men's magazine has outraged women's health specialists by urging men to "win" their girlfriend a boob job by sending in shots of her cleavage. Zoo Weekly magazine has launched an online competition offering $10,000 breast implants as a prize to the girl "who deserves it most".

"One lucky Zoo reader will be able to give his girlfriend the ultimate present," magazine editor Paul Merrill said in a statement.

"It's impossible to think of a more romantic gift than new breasts.

"It's the gift that keeps on giving." But women's health specialists and the Australian Society of Plastic Surgeons disagree, branding the competition a poor-taste publicity stunt that is unethical and possibly even illegal.

"I'm disgusted and appalled, and very doubtful they can even offer major body modification as a prize," said public health researcher Dr Jenny O'Dea, of the University of Sydney. "You simply cannot treat women in this way, like objects there for men's satisfaction."

The magazine has called for men, or their girlfriends, to send in shots of the woman's cleavage which are then voted on by readers.

"Once we've got them all in, our readers will vote for who deserves it the most," said Mr Merrill, who believes this is the first competition of its kind in the world. "The winner will receive the plastic surgery valued at $10,000." Dr Howard Webster, president of the Australian Society of Plastic Surgeons, said the organisation strongly disapproved of the stunt.

"It's medically unethical to offer surgery as a prize and furthermore it's inappropriate for a guy to win this prize and offer it to his girlfriend," Dr Webster said. "What would we think if a women's magazine ran a lottery for a penis enlargement and asked women to volunteer their boyfriends?" He said any surgeon who agreed to carry out the operation may be in breach of medical ethics and even the law.

A publicist for the magazine said the surgeon was still yet to be confirmed. Asked if she was aware that such a competition may be illegal, she said "that may be the case but that's something the winner can sort out directly."

Meanwhile, sexuality researcher Dr Julie Mooney-Somers, of the University of NSW, said she was concerned men would volunteer women without their knowledge. "What's to say these women even want a boob job or that it's even safe for them to have it," said Dr Mooney-Somers. "There may be some very horrified women out there thanks to this."
